Read the following passage and answer the questions given after it

A book by the Indian ambassador in the Netherlands highlights the historical and current exchanges that define the relationship between the two countries. The first book in which Malayalam appears prominently is the 'Hortus Malabaricus' (Garden of Malabar), a 12-volume treatise, written in Latin and published in Amsterdam from 1678 to 1693. Compiled over a period of 30 years, under directions from Hendrik van Rheede, a naturalist and colonial administrator, who was at the time the governor of Dutch Malabar, the Hortus Malabaricus gives a comprehensive account of the flora of the Malabar region, along with the properties and detailed sketches. Malayalam appears in this multilingual book, along with other languages that were common currency at the time, including Arabic and Konkani.

The Hortus Malabaricus was an important document of its time, as Venu Rajamony writes in his new book 'India and the Netherlands: Past, Present and Future', "the product of a multinational and multicultural team of botanical experts." Yet, it remained lost to the public until a botany scholar from Calicut, KS Mani, earned Latin and translated it first into English in 2003 and into Malayalam in 2008. Highlighting such instances of the Indo-Dutch artistic and cultural exchange through the last 400 years was the prime reason why Rajamony, who has been the Ambassador of India to the Netherlands, thought of writing this book. The book was released on 30 September 2019.

The connection between India and the Netherlands begins with the Dutch Golden Age, when the latter was a flourishing centre for commerce and artistic endeavours. Following Spain, Portugal and Great Britain, it also emerged as one of the great maritime nations of the world, establishing a far-flung empire thanks to the ventures of the Dutch East India Company. Over the course of his research for the book, Rajamony says, one of the things that surprised him was how taken the great Dutch master Rembrandt was with Indian miniature paintings, collecting them and even making drawings inspired by them. "I was pleasantly surprised to discover that as Rembrandt is considered an absolute master, who would only have made original paintings very rarely that a master like him would copy other artworks," says Rajamony. According to him, this fact is indicative of the high esteem in which Indian art was held in Europe.

SubQuestion No : 21

Q.21 Which statement is NOT true about 'Hortus Malabaricus'?

- Ans
- 1 It is a 12-volume treatise, written in Latin
 - 2 Many languages like Malayalam, Konkani and Arabic appear in the book
 - 3 It gives a comprehensive account of the flora in the Malabar region
 - 4 It was a product of a multinational and multicultural team of botanical experts

The Hortus Malabaricus was an important document of its time, as Venu Rajamony writes in his new book 'India and the Netherlands: Past, Present and Future', "the product of a multinational and multicultural team of botanical experts." Yet, it remained lost to the public until a botany scholar from Calicut, KS Mani, earned Latin and translated it first into English in 2003 and into Ma ayaam in 2008. Highlighting such instances of the Indo-Dutch artistic and cultural exchange through the last 400 years was the prime reason why Rajamony, who has been the Ambassador of India to the Netherlands, thought of writing this book. The book was released on 30 September 2019.

The connection between India and the Netherlands begins with the Dutch Golden Age, when the latter was a flourishing centre for commerce and artistic endeavours. Following Spain, Portugal and Great Britain, it also emerged as one of the great maritime nations of the world, establishing a far-flung empire thanks to the ventures of the Dutch East India Company. Over the course of his research for the book, Rajamony says, one of the things that surprised him was how taken the great Dutch master Rembrandt was with Indian miniature paintings, collecting them and even making drawings inspired by them. "I was pleasantly surprised to discover that as Rembrandt's considered an absolute master, who would only have made original paintings very rare that a master like him would copy other artworks," says Rajamony. According to him, this fact is indicative of the high esteem in which Indian art was held in Europe.

A book by the Indian ambassador in the Netherlands highlights the historical and current exchanges that define the relationship between the two countries. The first book in which Ma ayaam appears in print is the 'Hortus Malabaricus' (Garden of Malabar), a 12-volume treatise, written in Latin and published in Amsterdam from 1678 to 1693. Compiled over a period of 30 years, under directions from Hendrik van Rheede, a naturalist and colonial administrator, who was at the time the governor of Dutch Malabar, the Hortus Malabaricus gives a comprehensive account of the flora of the Malabar region, along with the properties and detailed sketches. Ma ayaam appears in this multilingual book, along with other languages that were common currency at the time, including Arabic and Konkani.

The Hortus Malabaricus was an important document of its time, as Venu Rajamony writes in his new book 'India and the Netherlands: Past, Present and Future', "the product of a multinational and multicultural team of botanical experts." Love of power is, perhaps, an even stronger motive than fear in enticing nations to pursue imperial policies. Although individual boastfulness is considered to be bad manners, national boastfulness is admitted at any rate, by the competitors of those who practise it. Throughout history, great nations have been led to disaster by unwillingness to admit that their power had limits. World conquest has been a war-of-the-weak by which one nation after another has been led to its downfall. Hitler's Germany is the most recent example. Going backwards in time, we find many other examples, of which Napoleon, Genghis Khan, and Attila are the most noteworthy. When Khrushchev threatens to obliterate the West, I am reminded of past examples of a similar folly.

To spread ruin, misery and death throughout one's own country as well as that of the enemy is the act of madmen. If East and West could cease their enmity, they could devote their scientific skills to their own welfare, to living without the burden of fear that on only their own folly has caused. For this is in the hearts of men that the evils lie. The troubles in the minds often, and this is strengthened in the minds of men that the cure must be sought.

There are those who say 'War is part of human nature, and human nature cannot be changed. If war means the end of man, we must sigh and submit.' This is a way said by those whose sigh is hypocritical. It is undeniable that there are men and nations to whom violence is attractive, but this is not the case that anything in human nature makes it impossible to restrain such men and nations. Individuals who have a taste for homicide are restrained by the criminal law, and most of us do not find it intolerable because we are not allowed to commit murders. The same is true of nations. Sweden has never been at war since 1814.

None of the Swedes that I have known has shown any sign of suffering from thwarted nationalist. For lack of war, Poland contests in a civilized country often raise just the kind of issues that would lead to war if they were between different nations. Not long ago, private disputes were often settled by duels, and those who upheld duelling maintained that this about would be contrary to human nature. They forgot, as present upholders of war forget, that what is called 'human nature' is, in the main, the result of custom and tradition and education, and, in civilized men, on a very tiny fraction is due to primitive instinct. If the world could live for a few generations without war, war would come to seem as absurd as duelling has come to seem to us.

Panchen Lama was just six years old when he was allegedly abducted by the Chinese government on 17 May 1995, along with his family members, after he was recognised by the Dalai Lama as the reincarnation of the 10th Panchen Lama

On the 25th anniversary of his disappearance, the Tibetan government-in-exile on Sunday demanded China to release the 11th Panchen Lama Gedhun Choekyi Nyima, considered to be a reincarnation of Bodhi Sattva Amtabha

In a statement issued here, the President of the exiled government, Lobsang Sangay, said China's abduction of the Panchen Lama and forced exile of his religious identity and the right to practice in his monastery is not only a violation of religious freedom but also a gross violation of human rights

After orchestrating the disappearance of the 11th Panchen Lama, Sangay alleged that China, a self-declared atheist government and infamous for its persecution of religious groups, placed a young boy, Gya-tsen Norbu, as the crown 11th Panchen Lama

"This political-motivated act on faith, however, to displace the position of the true Panchen Lama from the hearts and minds of the Tibetan people. For Tibetans and Buddhists around the world, Gedhun Choekyi Nyima will always be the true Panchen Lama," he added

Today marks the 25th anniversary of the 11th Panchen Lama's disappearance, said Sangay, adding that 25 years is a significant time in an individual's life

He said the communist government must honour its commitment of ethnic harmony in China by fulfilling the aspirations of the Tibetan people

"It must right the wrong and release the 11th Panchen Lama along with his family, Chadre Rnpoche, and all Tibetans unjustly imprisoned," he said while appealing to the international community to make a concerted effort to press China to release Nyima and resolve the critical human rights situation in Tibet

Read the following passage and answer the questions given after it

First, thousands of flamingos colonised the Tawa wetlands near NR Compex in Nav Mumbai pink during the lockdown, the numbers boosted by the sheer lack of human activity. Now, the water in part of the wetland itself has turned pink, probably due to an explosive blooming of red algae that thrives in saline water, especially as the summer picks up and the wetland loses water.

The deep pink water, located towards the south-eastern end of the wetland, was spotted on 14 May 2020. The pink water was not there till late last week. The bloom has been identified as a rare and first-of-its-kind occurrence for Mumbai Metropolitan Region by Bombay Natural History Society (BNHS) that plans to take samples of the water for study. However, a local resident, Seema Tanaka from NR Compex, Seawoods, said she had spotted the pink wash across a much larger area at the same creek in 2016. "A most 500-600m patch of the creek turned bright pink and we thought chemicals had been dumped in the creek," she said.

BNHS and independent microbiologists presume that the colour is from microscopic algae. "Owing to high salinity in the area, it looks like an algal bloom. Our researchers have never witnessed something like this along Mumbai's creeks," said Deepak Apte, director, BNHS. "Around the world, such a phenomenon has been observed regularly with red algae but it has to be investigated how it has appeared along the Mumbai creek."

Flamingos are known to feed on the algae, crustaceans, shrimp, and aquatic plants, which gives them the pink colour, said Apte. Dr P Sathiyasvam, assistant director (wetland conservation), BNHS said, "This is clearly an algal bloom. We have observed the same at the northern portion of Chika Lake (in Odisha) during early winter months over the years, and also towards the northern end of wetlands in Thoothukudi in Tamil Nadu." "This is a natural phenomenon. Vigorous growth of algae or bacteria having beta-carotene gives this type of characteristic colour to the water. This is also related to increased evaporation, salinity, and the current hot and humid weather conditions," said Rahu Khot, assistant director (in-charge of the flamingo monitoring program).

Ornithologist, naturalist and writer Sunjoy Monga said a similar scourge of water with a pink hue was witnessed at a flamingo habitat in Porbandar in May 2007. "This happened at the edges of the creek crammed with flamingos with high salinity displaying a pinkish-maroon wash to it." A similar example of what has been observed in Nav Mumbai was recently witnessed across a massive stretch at the Edgars Creek in Melbourne, Australia, that started on 10 May and intensified subsequently. The source of the pink water is being investigated, the Epoch Times reported. Other examples of changing water colour to pink across a much larger area has been observed at Cameron Falls in Waterton Lakes National Park, Canada and the Dead Sea, a salt lake between Israel and Jordan, to name a few.

First, thousands of flamingos colonised the Tawa wetlands near NR Compex in Nav Mumbai pink during the lockdown, the numbers boosted by the sheer lack of human activity. Now, the water in part of the wetland itself has turned pink, probably due to an explosive booming of red algae that thrives in saline water, especially as the summer picks up and the wetland loses water.

The deep pink water, located towards the south-eastern end of the wetland, was spotted on 14 May 2020. The pink water was not there till late last week. The boom has been identified as a rare and first-of-its-kind occurrence for Mumbai Metropolitan Region by Bombay Natural History Society (BNHS) that plans to take samples of the water for study. However, a local resident, Seema Tanaka from NR Compex, Seawoods, said she had spotted the pink wash across a much larger area at the same creek in 2016. "A most 500-600m patch of the creek turned bright pink and we thought chemicals had been dumped in the creek," she said.

BNHS and independent microbiologists presume that the colour is from microscopic algae. "Owing to high salinity in the area, it looks like an algal bloom. Our researchers have never witnessed something like this along Mumbai's creeks," said Deepak Apte, director, BNHS. "Around the world, such a phenomenon has been observed regularly with red algae but it has to be investigated how it has appeared along the Mumbai creek."

Flamingos are known to feed on this algae, crustaceans, shrimp, and aquatic plants, which gives them the pink colour, said Apte. Dr P Sathyasvaram, assistant director (wetland conservation), BNHS said, "This is clearly an algal bloom. We have observed the same at the northern portion of Chika Lake (in Odsha) during early winter months over the years, and also towards the northern end of wetlands in Thoothukudi in Tamil Nadu." "This is a natural phenomenon. Vigorous growth of algae or bacteria having beta-carotene gives this type of characteristic colour to the water. This is also related to increased evaporation, salinity, and the current hot and humid weather conditions," said Rahu Khot, assistant director (in-charge of the flamingo monitoring program).

Ornithologist, naturalist and writer Sunjoy Monga said a similar scourge of water with a pink hue was witnessed at a flamingo habitat in Porbandar in May 2007. "This happened at the edges of the creek crammed with flamingos with high salinity displaying a pinkish-maroon wash to it." A similar example of what has been observed in Nav Mumbai was recently witnessed across a massive stretch at the Edgars Creek in Melbourne, Australia, that started on 10 May and intensified subsequently. The source of the pink water is being investigated, the Epoch Times reported. Other examples of changing water colour to pink across a much larger area has been observed at Cameron Falls in Waterton Lakes National Park, Canada and the Dead Sea, a salt lake between Israel and Jordan, to name a few.

Read the following passage and answer the questions given after it

Western MP has received 1,335.4 mm metres of average rainfall from June 1 to September 25, 58% more than the region's historical normal of 845.3 mm for this period. However, the real story lies in the month-wise figures. In June, the opening month of the southwest monsoon season, the rains were actually 25.6% below the long-period average. In July, they were 31.2% above average. That surplus rose to 63.6% in August, while a whopping 158% more, so far in September.

The monsoon has taken its toll mainly on soyabean. According to the Union Agriculture Ministry's data, a total area of 113,449 lakh hectares (lh) has been planted under this leguminous crop in the current kharif season, with the bulk of it accounted for by MP (55.16 lh), Maharashtra (39.595 lh) and Rajasthan (10.608 lh). Within MP, the main soyabean-growing districts are Ujjain, Dewas, Indore, Dhar, Ratam, Mandasaur, Rajgarh, Shajapur, Sehore and Vidisha. The crop in low-yielding areas is the one that has been worst affected.

"Farmers who had sown early-maturity (80-90 days duration) varieties such as JS 9560 and JS 2034 just after mid-June will take the biggest hit. The crop would already have matured; the longer it remains in the field, the more the chances of the grain rotting. As a result, these farmers will not be able to save the grain for using as seed next year," admits V S Bhatia, director of the National Institute of Soyabean Research at Indore.

On the other hand, longer-duration varieties maturing in 95-105 days, like JS 20-69, NRC 86 and JS 97-52, are unlikely to suffer major yield losses, as the grain is not fully ripe yet for harvesting. Moreover, since the rains were poor in June, much of sowing anyway took place in July, thereby further reducing the likelihood of damage. "The vegetative growth and pod formation has been very good. As of now, the overall loss may be 10-15% and the areas where the crop is still good should compensate for those badly impacted," adds Bhatia.
